Chad and Ted play in the rain. It is so fun. They jump in a big mud puddle. They run and play games. When they come back in from the rain, they are very wet.

“Did you have a lot of fun playing in the rain?” asks Mom.

“Yes. It was a very fun day!” said Chad and Ted.

"Let's go for a bike ride!" Bill tells his dad.

"Do you think we should? It looks like it will rain," Dad says. "Let's go for a little while."

Bill and Dad get their bikes. They ride for a little while. Rain begins to fall. They rush back and get inside.

"That was fun!" Bill yells. "Can we do it again?"

“Let’s have a picnic!” Jill said to Chuck and Chad.

“We can ride our bikes to the lake,” said Chad.

“Mom will help us pack a lunch,” said Chuck.

Jill, Chuck, and Chad went to the lake. They ate the lunch their mom packed. Then they went on a bike ride. They had a good time.

Steve and Brad wanted to buy their mom a gift. They saved their cash and went to a gift shop. Steve picked up some soap and smelled it.

“This smells like roses,” said Steve.

“I think she will like that a lot,” said Brad.

So Steve and Brad spent their cash on the soap. When they gave it to their mom, she smiled and gave them a big hug.

“The next game is a big one!” the coach told his team. “We need to do the best we can. The other team is very good, but you can win if you do your best. You should go home and get a lot of rest.”

The next day at the game, the team ran and kicked. They made many goals.

“You beat the other team because you did your best,” the coach said. “Let’s go eat! It will be my treat.”

It's six o'clock, and the three goats want to eat. They need to cross the path to get to the good, green grass. But there is a mean man that keeps them away from the grass.

"This is what we can do," says the old goat. "I will run on the grass and make the man chase me. Then you two can eat and save some for me."

The plan went well! The goats ate a lot of grass and were very happy.

Bill thinks he left his blue jacket at the track, but it is not there.

"Coach, have you seen my jacket?"

Bill asked.

"No. I haven't," said the coach. "But I will help you think of some clues so you can find it. Did you have it when you came to the track?"

"I do not think so. That is a good clue. I bet I left my jacket in class!"

One day, Zack and Stan go sailing on Zack's blue boat. They sail on the lake.

Zack looks up high in the sky. The sky is getting gray. He yells to Stan, "We need to get back to land!"

On the way back, the storm begins. The wind blows fast, and it rains a lot.

"We're getting wet!" yells Stan. "But the storm is not bad. This was still a very fun day."

One morning, Father said to Mother,
"Let's run a race."

"Why do you want to run a race?" asked Mother. "Besides, it's not safe to race today. There is a lot of ice and snow on the road."

"Then we will wait until the ice and snow melt," said Father.

"Yes," smiled Mother. "We will wait and then I will beat you in a race!"

Ted dreamed he sailed on the sea in a little blue boat. He could see a speck in the waves. When Ted's boat got close to the speck, he could see the speck was a shark.

"You have sharp teeth. I must get away." Ted was very quick and sailed his boat far away from the shark. He was safe.

Ted woke up and was glad it was just a dream.

Pam and Al went to the park one night. It was very dark. They could see a lot of stars. They sat on the grass for a long time and looked up at the stars. Then Pam jumped up.

"Why did you jump up?" asked Al.

"An insect must have bitten me!" Pam said.

"Let's go back home," said Al. "We can sit on the porch and look at the stars."
